vertising Medium it has no competitor. In about two months the presidential election occurs, and yet there are few signs that such a momentous event is so near at hand. A number of considerations explain why there is as little apparent interest displayed. 1. The two leading parties nominated for the presidency well-known men, whose qualifications and whose views require no advertisement, and at the same time men whose occupation of the office had engendered enmittes within their respective parties. There were men to be placated by each, and time was a necessary element in the placation. Even yet, within two months of the election, some of the democratic chiefs are silent, if not sulking. 2. Another cause is the attitude of the old parties with reference to the silver question. S. The third party and the uncertainty in the south and west of its effect on the republican and democratic organizations. To these may now be added, perhaps, as a fourth cause the cholera and the cholers scare. The anxious politician need not worry himself about apathy so long as it is not confined to any one party but characterizes to some extent both of the older parties. The republican candidate has issued his letter of acceptance and his views have been read and commented upon. He has also been successfully, so far as appears, mending political fences. The letter of the democratic candidate is probably not far behind in date. There is possibly some advantage in having the last word in the acceptance of the presidential nomination, but in the work of quieting internal dissensions the advantage is conceded to be with the prompt reconciler, who takes the initiative.

To the people of Washington it is a matter of importance that the foreign mails, particularly those received from infected or suspected ports, and yet more especially those from the cholerastricken steamships in New York harbor, should be subjected to the latest and most approved methods of disinfection. A good deal of uneasiness would pervade the public mind if it were known or suspected that mail matter from the vessels on which cholera has occurred had passed through the mails without adequate treatment. If it should prove to be true that no fumigation or steam pressure had been applied to packages sent through the mails from those infected ships and that such dangerous missives had been distributed in the national capital the indignation of the public would be great. The STAR showed yesterday from an examination into the matter at the city post office that it was not clear to the officials there whether certain fourth-class matter marked "per steamship Normannia" and distributed by means of the carriers' deliveries was ever disinfected. There was no evidence of such disinfection, and a presumption, based on general orders to disinfect, is not to be considered conclusive. This is quite a serious matter, and there should be no sort of doubt in regard to the fact of disinfection of all foreign mails. Cholera is communicable as well by mail package, which is often merchandise most likely to carry germs, as by contact in any other man-

The republicans of North Carolina have nom inated a state ticket, and there is a feeling both among republicans and democrats that the third party movement is losing ground through bad management. The republican convention seems to have foreseen greater advantage, at least to the republican electoral and legislative tickets, in straightout action than either in open fusion or secret co-operation with the third party. Nevertheless, the posture of affairs may bring the two elements of opposition to dominant democracy into a sort of sympathy growing out of their mutual distike of the ruling party.

The landing of hundreds of immigrants from Russia and Germany at the port of Baltimore yesterday, after a short detention at quarantine, may not excite great alarm in view of th announcement that all were "healthy" and no suspicious antecedents were revealed. Indeed, they may have been all right from a saritary point of view. Nevertheless, an exceedingly close and careful local inspection of all immigrants, arriving either by steamer or train, is highly desirable. There can be no excess of vigilance in such cases; and ordinary watch fulness. in contrast with what the emergency demands, is negligence.

Whatever it was before, it is now Philanthropist Pierpont Morgan since he purchased the Stonington as a temporary home for the quarantined cabin passengers in New York harbor. An individual is sometimes greater when something is to be done than a nation of individuals, or paradoxically stated the part is greater than the whole.

It may happen, after all, that Candidate Cleveland will have a harder time with his present alleged friends than his late alleged enemies; in other words, that it is not so much the Hill influence that is to be piscated as the Grace influence that is to be chained up.

The republicans are taking democratic gerrymanders into the courts all around, the latest case being in Indiana. The democrats, on the other hand, only take the republican gerrymanders into the newspapers - a much less effective way of dealing with the evil.

The recent maltreatment of women by white caps in Tennessee should meet with the severest ounishment if the guilty parties can be discovered. The depravity of the women, great as it may have been, was no justification for the brutality of these men. .

At the venerable age of sixty-eight the Springfield Republican announces further improvements in that well-regulated newspaper. In this case multiplicity of years does not imply

Thos. B. Reed and Jas. G. Blaine both neglected to mention Harrison in their campaign productions. Cleveland probably wishes that Editor Dana would do as much for him. The success that has attended the efforts to keep cholers out of the United States is rearkable. The record should not be disturbed by any relaxation of vigilance.

There are thirty towns in the United State called "Washington." It is extremely gratifying for a city to be able to command so much admiring imitation. One of the sweetest reflections that current events afford is the thought that the musical nfection "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay" is at present in quarantine. It is a pleasure to note that there was no kite shaped track or pneumatic-tire embellishment in connection with Corbett's victory. Mr. Platt took his time about marifesting his party loyalty, but he made a very neat job of it. Verbum sap. Mr. Hill. The cholera bacillus has had its picture taken. As in numerous other instances, its powers are not to be estimated by its appearance. The prize fight is now over and a large repre sentation of this country's population will take breath and feel a little bit ashamed of itself.
